Brian Zahnd had a moment like that. He opens his book, 'A Farewell to Mars' by naming his worst sin. It was the sin of praying a war prayer. After 9/11, he attended a prayer rally in his town where he was asked to pray. Rather than praying for peace or reconciliation, he prayed for God to bless America as she geared up for war.

(Taken from A Farewell to Mars). The problem with our “change the world” rhetoric is that it is too often a thinly veiled grasp for power and a quest for dominance—things that are antithetical to the way Jesus calls his disciples to live. As we remember Hiroshima, Nagasaki, and the quarter of a million casualties suffered, I would like to share a few words from A Farewell To Mars. It's easy to imagine that the world doesn't really change — that it simply marches around the maypole of violence, trampling the victims into the mud same as it ever has.
