in modern Christian thought. Few Protestant theologians in the middle of the 20th century were willing to endorse the ancient dogma of the two natures in Christ as unconditionally as the reformers had done, for between the Reformation and modern theology there intervened a debate over Christology that altered the perspective of most Protestant denominations and theologians.

The debate over Christology in modern Christian thought

The twentieth century saw the decline of Christian thought and culture as the intellectual lingua franca of the Western world. While the signers of the two Humanist Manifestoes of the early 20th century may have been viewed as radical at the time, by the end of the century secularism was the common baseline in academic and intellectual circles.
