The Four Loves - Wikipedia

In this candid, wise, and warmly personal book, C.S. Lewis gently reflects on the four basic kinds of human love--affection, friendship, erotic love, charity. He explores the promise and the perils of love between parents and children; love men share with other men and women with other women; love shared between men and women; and the love of and for God that deepens all love.

The Four Loves

The Four Loves, written by C.S. Lewis and originally published in 1960, presents the author's philosophical and theological differentiation of four types of love: Friendship, Affection, Eros, and Charity. Affection, Friendship, and Eros are classified as "natural" (116) loves, while Charity receives a higher distinction in that it is closest to the type of love that is defined by the maxim "God is love"(1), the premise that underlies all of his arguments.

Pt 5 "The Four Loves" C.S. Lewis - "The Question Of God" (PBS)

In his book, The Four Loves, author and theologian C. S. Lewis elaborates on the essence of each of these varieties of love and uses love as an entry point for understanding the Christian message. What sets this book apart is that Lewis not only presents a compelling case for Christianity, but also offers ways for Christians themselves to grow.
